

KEARNS HIGH SCHOOL

Memo No. 45

August 2016

SUBJECT: CONTACTING PARENTS

Teachers should plan to contact parents whenever necessary to improve the quality of education for each student, especially when a student is missing from class without proper notification from the parent or when there is an attendance pattern. Parents should also be notified when a student has excessive tardies to a class.

"Positive reinforcement" calls to parents informing them that their students have done a good job in class and that you appreciate them and their excellent efforts, pays big dividends in student success.

Well-informed parents and students will always be supportive of our programs. We know that this is a big job, but one that is worthwhile.
