

Week 3 Study Guide

Abundant/Abundance	You have more than enough, you have plenty, you are rich.
Bias	One thing has better chance of being chosen (non-random, which skews the data you have gathered. Someone is discriminated against. We tend to see just what we want to see. You know how to make your skirt, jacket, or cape have a beautiful drape.
Citation	You tell your reader where you got that great idea by using a formal quotation. You are intellectually honest.
Character	You notice a person acts the same way because of their personality. These also exist in fictional literature, computer games and can be played by actors. Strangely, this can also mean the alphabet and weirdos.
Data	Information you gather without bias, to answer a question.
Focus	You direct all of your attention to one task (job). You get yourself into a state of mind where you can understand things clearly.
Grate Great G8	Use a device to make smaller particles (of cheese, for example) Tremendous, large, handsome A humorous use of letters and numerals together
Plagiarism	A student just cuts and pastes, pretending that they talk like a doctor, without telling where they got that quotation. This can actually be illegal and get you into a lot of trouble! Just use citations, okay?
